

Conditions Relating to the Award of

Commercialisation Training Scheme (CTS) Awards

Tenable at

JAMES COOK UNIVERSITY

The objective of the CTS is to provide high quality research commercialisation training for the next generation of Australian researchers as a means of equipping them with the skills, knowledge and experience necessary to bring research-based ideas, inventions and innovations to market.

Commercialisation Training Scheme Awards are offered and funded in accordance with the Department of Education, Employment & Workplace Relations (DEEWR) Guidelines.

For example, a Graduate Certificate in Research Commercialisation has been approved at each of the five Australian Technology Network Universities. The one semester full-time equivalent course will be entirely online through the Australian Technology Network's e-Grad School (see <http://www.egradschool.edu.au/whategsaoffe/gradcert.jsp>)

 - d. not have previously completed CTS training or an equivalent program.
- 1.2 Students may be exempted from 1.1a above only, to allow them to finish CTS training during their thesis examination period on condition that no more than three months of full-time or equivalent part-time study is required to complete CTS training.
