

PUNCTUATION—END OF SENTENCE: THE PERIOD, AND QUESTION & EXCLAMATION MARKS

In any writing you do, you need to keep the reader in mind. To make your message easy to understand, use the period, and question and exclamation marks to help perfect and emphasise what you mean.

Name & Symbol....	What it does
1. End of sentence: Period [.]	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Use a period to signal the completion of a thought; end a declarative sentence (a sentence that makes a statement or declares something) [e.g. Muscle cramping may be the first sign of heat-related illness.] • Insert a period directly after the final word and follow this with a space [eg. ...data is available. For the current study...] • Use a period at the end of an indirect question [e.g. The question is whether the legislation can be supported.] • If a sentence ends with a parenthetical, place the period outside the closing parenthesis [e.g. There is more tourist movement in December-January (the peak travel period).] • If the information within the parenthesis is a complete sentence, the period is placed inside the parenthesis [e.g. The advertisement's caption uses clear and direct language (It also elicits a reaction in the viewer/consumer.)]
2. End of sentence: Question mark [?]	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Use a question mark at the end of a direct question [e.g. What is the correlation between chocolate intake per capita and dental cavities?] • If a question occurs within a longer sentence, you use a question mark [e.g. The key question, What is the correlation between chocolate intake per capita and dental cavities? was not answered.]. • Requests phrased as questions end with a period [e.g. Would you please forward the report to all persons indicated below.]
3. End of sentence: Exclamation Mark [!]	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The exclamation mark is used to express strong emotions: excitement, surprise, astonishment, shock, protest or dismay; they are usually used with Oh! Wow! Oh No! etc. • Although used in literary texts, business, technical, scientific and regulatory writing aims to communicate information objectively, not emotionally, so avoid exclamation marks
