Introduction

The JCU Student Advisory Forum was established to promote cross-institutional communication and interaction among JCU students and staff. The Forum is designed to encourage a culture of effective student engagement by:

- Providing an opportunity for student representatives to provide feedback to the University on issues of interest to students;
- Providing a forum for student representatives to participate in University and Divisional decision-making processes;
- Providing a forum where student representatives can provide feedback on course matters, while also providing advice on and assistance with the development of new course offerings across discipline areas;
- Aiding in the co-creation of solutions, and development of new and innovative ideas and practices;
- Providing an occasion for University representatives to respond to issues raised by student representatives; and
- Enhancing student employability by offering opportunities for students to gain experience and develop new skill sets.

Frequently Asked Questions

Q. How are Forum members nominated?

A. A call for student nominations will occur each February via email bulletin. The process for nomination and associated criteria will be advertised on the JCU Student Advisory Forum webpage.

Q. What preparation is required?

A. It won't be necessary for you to do any significant preparatory work before a Forum meeting. There may be occasions when a paper is circulated with a meeting agenda for members' information. Student engagement with the Forum can be as direct as reflecting on your own experience and raising ideas or comments at a meeting which you feel could improve the overall student experience at JCU. Your observations of University life or interactions with other students will help inform your contribution to the Forum.

Q. When will I receive the Forum agenda?

A. The Forum secretariat will issue a call for agenda items by email two weeks before a scheduled Forum meeting. Members may submit their comments or concerns in response.

Q. What kind of items go on the Agenda?

A. Above all, JCU seeks to involve students in the Forum and ensure members feel part of, and feel supported by, the University. Here's some examples of the types of issues or topics that might be added to an Agenda:

- Feedback to the University on issues of interest to students;
- Participation in University and Divisional decision-making processes by commenting on papers or giving feedback or suggestions;
- Feedback on current course matters, as well as advice on and assistance with development of new course offerings across discipline areas;
- Aiding in the co-creation of solutions and development of new, innovative ideas and practices;
- Responding to issues raised by student representatives and senior staff;
- Sharing observations with the Academy regarding University life and ways in which it could be enhanced or improved.

Q. How else can I raise my questions or concerns?

A. Topics or issues of concern can be raised with the Forum secretariat by email before a meeting. Alternatively, you can raise them at the actual Forum meeting, even if they are not directly related to an Agenda item.

Q. What happens to my comments and/or feedback?

A. JCU appreciates your contribution to the Student Advisory Forum and will endeavor to make your membership a constructive one. When you provide comments or ideas at a Forum meeting, senior staff members will provide a response at the meeting. Where a response cannot be provided, a follow-up response will be made.

Q. What will happen if I can't attend a Forum meeting?

A. JCU recognises that members will have other obligations from time to time, which could include paid work, family or personal study commitments, or a combination of all these. If a meeting time conflicts with other commitments, you may provide your apologies and attend the next Forum meeting. If you cannot attend a Forum meeting, but have relevant issues to put forward, you can send an email to the Forum secretariat to have your issues raised.

Q. Are there other ways I can contribute to the JCU Student Advisory Forum?

A. Members who are interested in contributing to the student experience beyond the scope of the JCU Student Advisory Forum are welcome to contact the Forum secretariat, who may be able to identify staff members or student groups with knowledge of other initiatives of interest.

Q. Can other students (non-members) attend Forum meetings as observers?

A. Students may come along to JCU Student Advisory Forum meetings as observers. Attendance must be pre-arranged by contacting the Forum secretariat. Please note that observers are not permitted to actively participate in Forum meetings; they are in attendance as observers only.
